

Looking around our ice bar, it's hard to miss the incredible sculptures, detailed carvings, and our bar made entirely of ice.

While you might think something like this takes an army, behind it all is just one man: Victor Cagayat. Originally from the Philippines, where he began his career in wood carving, Victor moved to New Zealand and quickly became the most sought-after ice carver in the country. With over 25 tonnes of ice in the bar, every last piece of it is hand-carved magic by Victor.

The process to create these extraordinary sculptures starts with melting large blocks of ice together - supplied by the legendary Richard from Queenstown Ice. Victor then uses a chainsaw to shape the ice before moving on to a hand file to carve in every last detail.

Despite all the physical, finely tuned work that goes into our ice bars, Victor remains one of the happiest people we've ever met and we're honoured to showcase his work at Queenstown Ice Bar.
